Home Sharing is when a community member and an adult with a disability share their lives. Relationships are characterized by warmth and mutual respect.

The most common example of home sharing is when someone opens their home and lifestyle to a person with a disability. Occasionally, a Home Share provider moves into a home owned by the individual. In every situation, the person decides how they want to live their life. People always have their own bedroom although some people may want a private suite with a separate entry.

Your role as a Home Share provider is to offer flexible support based on the individual's needs. This includes support with life and home skills, personal care, and participating in community events and activities

When you're ready to get started, the first step is to meet with one of our team members to share information and complete an application. Next, we will complete a comprehensive home study. This is done to ensure that your beliefs, values, skills and home are a good fit.

Once you are approved, we will take great care to make the right match. When the individual decides that they want to live with you, a transition plan will be developed.

We are always available to support you through meetings, visits to your home, phone calls and emails. As part of your contract, you will need to submit reports and work with everyone involved.

Home sharing is very rewarding. You can help the individual develop relationships and experience belonging as a valued member of their community. Chances are you will grow as a person as well.

INSPIRING A COMMUNITY WHERE WE ALL BELONG

Available Opportunities for Home Share

Middle-aged woman seeking a supportive home share in Langley or Cloverdale. This individual's preference is to be close to restaurants and shopping. She would like to share a home with a single woman or a couple either with older or no children. She is able to be home alone and travels the community without assistance. Some support with health concerns related to aging would be needed.

Man in his early 30's seeking a supportive home share in central Langley, Aldergrove, Cloverdale or Clayton. A separate suite is preferred but he is also open to sharing the care provider's primary residence with them. A couple or single person with no children is ideal. This gentleman is quiet and thoughtful and travels the community independently using transit so having easy access to the bus system would be best. Intermittent support and occasional reminders are needed to ensure that he is enjoying a full life.

Woman in her early 50's seeking someone to share her home as a 'roommate'. Beautiful three bedroom home in the Fort Langley area – monthly funding along with free accommodation included. Ideal match would be a single female of similar age who would enjoy spending time together on shared interests. Individual enjoys crafts, drawing and music. No pets or children please.

Young man who turns 19 soon seeking a 'roommate' in Langley. An experienced male care provider with no children is preferred. Shared rent along with a monthly compensation package is available to the right person. The successful Home Share provider would be able to offer ongoing guidance, counselling and support. Ideally, they are a strong, positive role model who can provide a structured, predictable home environment. He is very people oriented, loves to chat, has a giving spirit and is exceptionally charismatic. He enjoys pets, travel, being with family, and has just graduated from high school and is excited to begin exploring what his future holds.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR INTEREST!

Inclusion Langley Society currently supports more than 100 adults through our locally-based Home Share service. We often have new opportunities for Home Share each month and encourage you to contact us to find out more.
